

Storms Kill 9; Up To 200 Missing

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The U. S. Coast Guard said today that perhaps as many as 200 persons were still unaccounted for in the wake of howling thunderstorms that swept into northern Ohio from Lake Erie Friday night, killing at least nine persons and injuring more than 300.

The Coast Guard said, however, that no drownings had been reported, that communication was poor, and that "it was only a matter of time" before any survivors of storm-related boating mishaps were found.

Forty Coast Guard boats and 12 planes were combing Lake Erie for persons from the 200 small boats the Coast Guard estimated capsized during the storms.

The Coast Guard said it hoped to have later in the day a complete list of all those unaccounted for.

The storm smashed into the Toledo area at 8:15 p.m. Friday, cutting off half the city's power and producing a tornado which damaged some 10 homes in the city's Point Place area.

Speeding eastward with winds clocked at 60 and 100 miles an hour, the storms produced other funnel clouds in Hancock, Huron, Cuyahoga, Geauga, and Lake counties.

Extensive damage to trees and power lines was reported all along the storm paths which extended more than 50 miles into the state from Lake Erie.

A Toledo man was killed by a falling tree at Cedar Point amusement park near Sandusky. At least three other persons were killed in the Cleveland area by trees, and two Cleveland men were electrocuted by downed power lines.

National Guard troops were ordered into Ottawa County and the Cleveland suburb of Lakewood to help clean up damage. Gov. James A. Rhodes said he would tour the northern part of the state today to assess the damage.

Several hundred persons were stranded temporarily on an island in the Cedar Point amusement park near Sandusky by high waters.

An estimated 200 persons escaped serious injury when a tent collapsed on them during a "Mardi Gras" at Fairport Harbor, east of Cleveland.

"I've never seen anything come up so fast and throw down so much water in so little time," said Robert Cullins of Dreden, Ohio, who was with his family at the Cedar Point amusement park when the storms hit.

"It was real funny at first, but then the storm came up all at once and everyone went into a panic," said Carol Harwell of Mansfield, one of the persons trapped on a small island in the park by rising waters.

"It just rained and rained," she said. "People were just running everywhere and there were lost children. Water was up to your knees in places."

"You say it sweeping across the lake from the west, a real bad storm," said Cleveland Robert Coatman, who was in his 16-foot boat awaiting a fireworks display at Cleveland's Edgewater Park.

"We headed for shore fast and ran right through the barrier the city had just put up to protect swimmers. Twenty boats must have hit it at the same time."

A short circuit in a beer cooler caused the fire. Minor damage was done to the cooler.

Seafaring Spain Space Age Port

By KENNETH L. DAVIS
PONTEVEDRA, Spain (AP) — Seafaring Spain, looking to the day when million-ton tankers and giant dry cargo carriers ply the oceans, hopes to parlay three Atlantic estuaries into Europe's port of the space age.

Maritime visionaries in the land of the Armada, foreseeing the need for four or five massive wholesale ports, count on the saw-toothed coast of Galicia just above Portugal to become a major complex handling well over 100 million tons of sea freight and petroleum a year.

Specifically, they count on the estuaries of Villagarcia de Arosa, Pontevedra and Vigo — minor Spanish ports now — to form the traffic-winning complex. All three together handled 1,202,000 tons, including fish, in 1967.

The economic council of northeast Spain syndicates calculated in a recent study of Spanish ports that by 1980 Europe would need four or five crude oil deposit ports, each with an annual capacity of 100 million tons as a minimum. By that year, the study concluded, sea freight passing near the Spanish Atlantic coast would reach around 870 million tons a year, of which 684 million tons would be petroleum.

Prototype of the wholesale port of the future is Bantry Bay, Ireland, where Gulf Oil has begun a project for a huge oil deposit complex. From this depository smaller tankers will fan out to serve petrol-hungry Europe.

Future wholesale ports, the Spanish Council decided, must be capable of handling ships of 500,000 to 900,000 tons. They must have room, too, for repair facilities, sufficient solid land around the ports for both petroleum and dry cargo deposits and more land for the industrial development the Spaniards figure will accompany such a port. Back of all this must be a top-notch land communications.

Moreover, the council said, ports already crowded with industry will not do for lack of expansion room.

Not many places have the natural facilities needed. A tanker of 500,000 tons, for instance, needs labor and wharf depth of 100 feet. A 200,000-ton dry cargo vessel needs 67 feet depth. And, they need this

Dunagan House Entered

Dan Dunagan, 915 Lora St., told police this morning his home had been broken into. Nothing had been taken.

At 1:30 a.m. Dunagan again called police and stated a blond haired, ten-year-old youth had peeped into his window. Dunagan gave pursuit, but failed to catch the boy.

The windshield of a car belonging to Jerry Matlock, Sikeston, was smashed Friday by a chunk of pavement. Matlock said a white 1962 Pontiac was speeding along Vanduser Road and kicked up the missile which broke the glass.

Earl Cook, 404 Prosperity, told police the Model Barber shop 127 North New Madrid, was entered Friday night. Tax papers and other items were scattered through the shop. Cook also said a green sack containing $20 was missing. The doors were locked when he arrived.

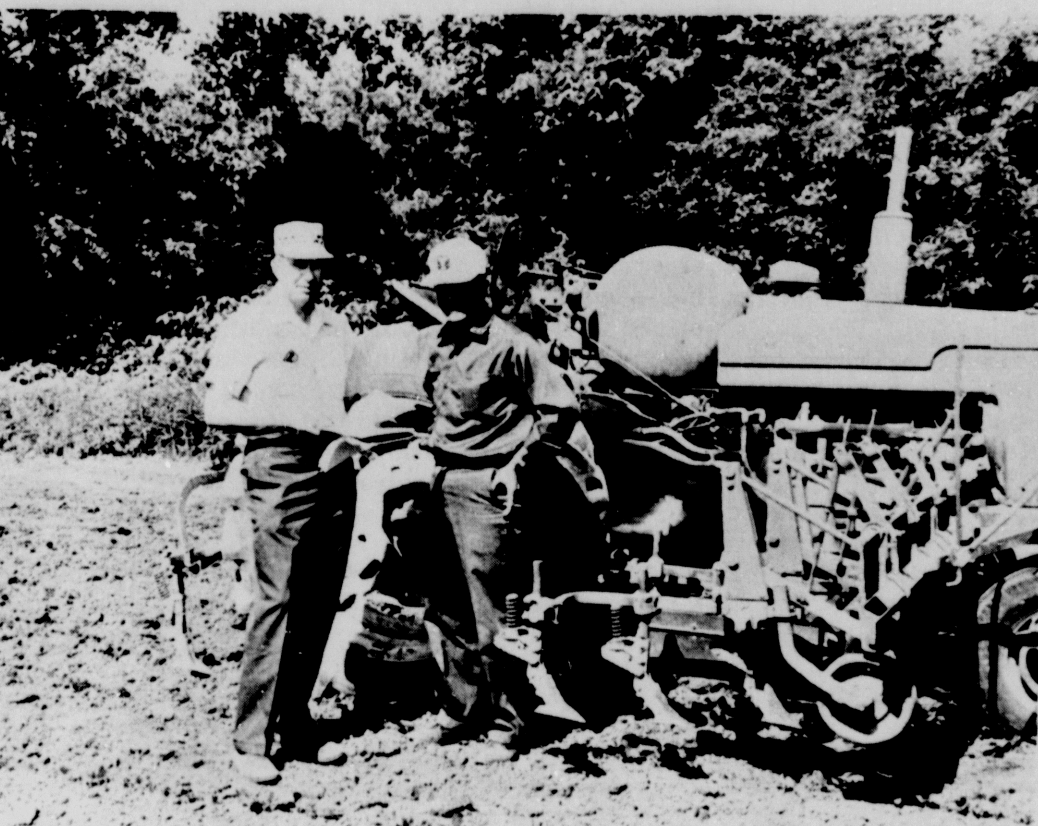

Dr. A.P. Sargent, Missouri Delta Community Hospital, treated David Holifield, Sikeston, Friday, for numerous injuries received in a fight at Jessie Berry's residence, 228 Alabama. Holifield was later released, after examination.

Police reported the following citations: Larry Gene Hickson, Malden, driving a motorcycle without a helmet, and Roy Jones, 1114 Osage St., driving while intoxicated.

Family Progresses From Cotton Picking to Farming

By H. H. TOWNSEND JR.
LILBOURN — Hard work, diversified farming and good credit practices, with the help of the Farmers Home Administration, have been the key to success in farming for Leman F. Samples and his wife, Gunda, route one, Lilbourn.

Samples met his wife in 1957 in Germany while serving with the Army. He returned home and in 1959 she came to America, and they were married.

She had never seen a stalk of cotton, but went to the fields with him to help earn a living, as their only source of income was picking cotton.

Their hard work paid off in 1961 James Girvin, Portageville, rented a 111-acre farm to Samples so he could begin farming for himself. It was at this time that he sought a loan from the Farmers Home Administration to begin his farming.

In a few years Samples and his wife moved to a 200-acre farm owned by H. C. Baldwin at Tallapoosa. Last year they moved to a 330 acre farm, also owned by Baldwin, about seven miles southwest of Lilbourn. All but 16 acres of the farm have now been brought to grade and irrigation wells dug.

This year he will grow 60 acres of cotton, 30 acres of corn, 42 acres of milo, 46 acres wheat and 136 acres of soybeans.

On his 16 acres of pasture, he has 31 sows and two boars. He presently has 80 feeder pigs, which he expects to sell this month.

With his balance farming practices and the extra income that she was looking for Leman Samples, she was then taken to the home of his parents near Portageville.

Not finding his finance, Leman returned from St. Louis and the happy couple was reunited at 9 o'clock the next morning. They were married August 29, 1959, and have worked as a team ever since.

Gunda received her citizenship papers in 1964. She hopes to save enough money to return to Germany to visit her sister.

Arriving in St. Louis, after 12 days on a boat, she looked for her husband to-be, and waited for over an hour, with no sign of Samples. She had failed to realize that he didn't have an automobile and had to take a bus to meet her in St. Louis.

Unable to speak English very well, she managed to get a ticket on a bus to Portageville. Somewhere midway between St. Louis and there, she passed him; unaware of this, of course, he proceeded to St. Louis to meet her. She arrived at Portageville about 4 a.m. and managed to make the local police understand that she was looking for Leman Samples. She was then taken to the home of his parents near Portageville.

Little White House Conference Complete

Numerous recommendations for schools, families, churches and government have been established by the 1970 White House Conference on Children and Youth.

Members of the Conference from Mississippi, Stoddard and Scott counties met 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Senior High School to draw up the final recommendations.

The conference made an overall observation about their studies. The conference found in all of areas of discussion, that failure in the family is a great part of the trouble which exists in school, church and government activities.

Recommendations for schools are as follows:

A—Relevancy of curriculum to present-day and future needs.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend to the schools

that a change from heavy emphasis on ancient history to a more emphasis on contemporary courses be carried out in the existing school program.

B—Youth Participation and Involvement.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend and encourage the schools to enforce regulations and rules promoted by the duly constituted authorities.

C—Sex Education.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend that sex education be the responsibility of the home with assistance from the church and school, and that it include instruction in values, beginning at no specific age but preferably an early one.

D—Relevancy of teacher training, and instructional methods, materials and aids.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend that some way be found to fund the additional psychometric testing to children with preceptual learning disabilities, commencing with kindergarten or no later than the first grade.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend and encourage such actions as necessary to see that gap and take the initiative to special education aids and eliminate it.

C—Day-Care Facilities.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend that day-care facilities be expanded to meet the needs of the communities.

D—Foster-Care Facilities.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend the State increase its share of funds toward Foster-Care facilities, particularly to meet the needs of special care homes.

E—Continued education program responsibility to unwed school age pregnant girls and mothers.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend to the school authorities that an unwed mother be allowed to return to school and continue her education subsequent to the birth of her child.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend that vocational and technical training be encouraged and increased, but not at the expense of academic training.

OBSERVATION: While the school has its responsibility for the educational training and character training, the primary responsibility remains with the family and church. The school can not replace either the family or church.

Recommendations for family are as follows:

A—Counseling services (family, pre-marital, in divorce).

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend that licensed, trained counseling be made available in pre-marital and marriage matters.

B—Communication gap — parent — child relationships.

RECOMMENDATIONS: We recommend that adults recognize the communication gap and take the initiative to eliminate it.

C—Day-Care Facilities.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend that day-care facilities be expanded to meet the needs of the communities.

D—Foster-Care Facilities.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend the State increase its share of funds toward Foster-Care facilities, particularly to meet the needs of special care homes.

E—Continued education program responsibility to unwed school age pregnant girls and mothers.

Kenyan Official Assassinated

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Tom Mboya, Kenya's 38-year-old minister of economic planning and development, was assassinated in a crowded city center in Nairobi at lunch time today.

Mboya was shot twice or three times by a lone assassin as he left a pharmacy in Government Road. He fell to the ground after being shot in the chest—apparently killed instantly.

Travers Asks Special Session

ST. LOUIS (AP) — John K. Travers, St. Louis collector of revenue, urged Gov. Warren E. Hearnes Friday to call a special session of the Legislature to authorize increasing the city's earnings tax.

Travers said the session should be held in August. He said an increase of one-half per cent would yield about $16.5 million in additional revenue for the city. This would be tied with a cut in the city's personal property and real estate taxes for a net gain of $8.5 million.

The revenue collector had two main reasons for choosing an increase in the earnings tax connected with a decrease in property tax.

"The reduction of the property tax would encourage new business to settle in the city, thereby helping resolve the basic problem facing our city," Travers said. He said he did not like the idea of an increase in the sales tax because it "would be detrimental to those who can least afford any tax increase—the elderly on fixed income and the poor."

Cold Hospitalizes Mamie

LAKENHEATH, England (AP) — Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower, widow of Dwight D. Eisenhower, was taken to the U.S. Air Force hospital here today after developing a cold. The hospital said her condition was good.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in London said Mrs. Eisenhower, 72, was taken ill with a bad cold Friday night in Birmingham while en route to Scotland for a week's private visit.

"Because of her age it was thought best to get her to a hospital," he said. "There is no question of evacuating her to the States."

An Air Force spokesman said Mrs. Eisenhower was in the hospital for observation "but it does not seem to be very serious."

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

The manufacture of a good product is only one step in the process of the creation of wealth.

Shortly after World War II, Henry J. Kaiser built a good compact automobile which seemed to fit a real need in the American market. Although the new Kaiser compact, the "Henry J," was widely promoted the national media, the automobile was not accepted by the public.

Two years later other compact automobiles were in significant demand. The compacts claimed a profitable and permanent place in the American market.

Why did the Kaiser automobile fail to arouse what was obviously an important latent demand for a small, inexpensive car? Market analysts attributed the failure to several factors:

1. Insufficient time was given to the promotion of a new concept in automobiles.

2. The potential market for the car was not sharply defined. In the United States the compact is often a second, or third, family car. This trend was not anticipated in 1950.

3. Although the "Henry J" was intensively promoted, insufficient attention was given to specific benefits which could be derived from owning a small car.

4. Local advertising and sales efforts were inadequate. The lack of local dealers, salesmen, and local newspaper advertising was probably a decisive factor. Few people are willing to invest in an expensive product without a final stimulus in the local community.

Local dealers were needed to give personal assurances and demonstrations to prove that the promises of the advertising were valid. Such is the combination which keeps all automobiles on the market, and eventually builds the nation's wealth.

Outpointed. In Houston, after a domestic brawl, Mrs. John Womack nursed a hurt finger, husband John a broken 1) nose, 2) bone in his right foot, 3) rib, 4) pair of spectacles.

When I was growing up and went away - perhaps, to visit out-of-town for a day; there was always a phrase that my father would say: "Be good."

I paid little attention, except, maybe, to smile; my thoughts were on being away for a while, I doubted he noticed the words that he spoke; they were inconsequential, like a catch-phrase or joke.

"Be good!" ... Father died and years sped past. And, though dimming, my memories of him held fast. But, in the procession of life-filled days, I forgot his goodbys using that two-word phrase: "Be good."

Recently, my son was going far away from family and friends, for a few days' stay. Suddenly, across the years, I understood. My last words to him were: "Goodbye, son. Be good."

The roadway centerline. If you drive a car, you see one virtually every day, along with road-edge striping, lane and crosswalk stripes and all manner of roadway markings.

The way they affect you is somewhat peculiar. You usually don't notice them unless they're not there. Other times, you're conscious of them only when you couldn't move without them -- like the centerline in a dense fog, for example.

There's an interesting story surrounding today's bright, multicolored, see - in - the - dark reflectorized roadway markings, and this is the first of three columns that will tell that story.

First, some history. The oldest on - the - pavement marking known is the centerline. Some say it dates back to Roman times. In the New World, there's a 400-year-old road that runs between Mexico City and Cuernavaca (Sair-na-va-ka). Made of paving stones, the center of this road contains a line of light-colored stones.

The next historical reference to pavement markings is dated 1911. Again, it concerns the centerline. The rediscovery of this as a driving safety aid is attributed to one Edward N. Hines of Detroit. As the story goes, he was driving his motor car one day behind a wagon, from which a small stream of white mortar was spilling.

"Eureka!" one can almost hear him say: "Why not paint a white line down the center of the road to help drivers stay on their own side?"

And so it began. But at first, and for a number of years thereafter, centerlines were applied only at particularly hazardous spots -- hills, curves, narrow bridges, etc. And they were painted by hand, with a brush, using white lead paint.

As traffic increased following World War I, use of the centerline spread to more and more stretches of main highway, hazardous or not. Machines were developed to lay the lines from the backs of moving trucks. Eventually, within the last 20 years, centerlines began to appear on secondary paved roads, and multilane highways started sprouting lines to denote each lane.

Another development that began to appear about 20 years ago was the yellow line that, when it's on your side of the centerline, denotes a "no passing zone". Still more recent are lines marking the side of the road and, even more current, the use of reflective material instead of white paint, to make the lines more visible at night.

The older you become, the more it costs you to have a good time.

IVAN IS GRABBING FOR THE ISTHMOSES

The Communist regime in Russia has been aware ever since World War II of the importance of ocean shipping and the control of foreign trade routes. A major effort is being made by Russia today to build up its merchant fleet, and the effort is meeting with great success. If present trends continue, in only a few years Russia will have far outdistanced the United States in the tonnage of its merchant ships.

Likewise, Russia has built up its navy until today that fleet is considered second only to that of the United States. Russia has well over 500 submarines, some of them armed with nuclear - type missiles. This fleet is large enough to patrol most of the world's major sea lanes.

But Russia is working on still another means of obtaining control of shipping routes. There are six straits or areas of "narrow water" through which most of the world's trade passes. Some of these are so narrow that only one ship at a time may pass. Yet, they are essential to fast, economical ocean trade.

The six points of narrow water are: the Suez Canal, the Panama Canal, Strait of Gibraltar, Strait of Malacca (between Malay peninsula and Sumatra), the Skagerrak leading out of the Baltic Sea, and the Dardanelles leading out of the Black Sea. The Baltic and Black Seas are virtually Russian lakes, which leaves four straits for the Russians to gain. All are potential bottlenecks in the hands of a power wanting to control world commerce.

The Suez Canal is under Egypt's Nasser. Egypt is receiving vast quantities of Communist aid, and many Russian technicians are in Egypt helping build the economy in various ways. In the event of war, Russia could probably exercise effective control at this point.

While Gibraltar presents a real problem, and is still guarded by the British, the Russians have conducted a build-up just across the strait of Morocco. They have built bases, delivered planes, and generally fortified the area.

We all know what is going on with regard to Panama. The Communist take-over in Cuba is one phase of the Red effort to gain control in Latin America, and especially to get control of the Panama Canal, the vital link between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. They have played upon the patriotism of youthful Panamanians to foment hatred for the United States until today a new treaty is being hammered out in secret between Panama and the United States - and the word is that the United States is making concessions about the canal.

If we turn over control of the canal to the weak Panamanian government, will we not be inviting the Communists to redouble their efforts to control the canal? It is a prize well worth their efforts. They are active in Venezuela, Colombia, Peru, Panama and other nearby countries - with the blessing of Castro and the Kremlin.

The Reds were also working toward control of the Malacca Strait while the Communists were in the ascendancy in Indonesia. They thought they would not only gain control of the strait but would be able to effectively handle trade with the rice bowl of Southeast Asia and encircle Singapore and India, as well as other small nations in the area.

Control of these four major straits would mean effective control of ship movements and world commerce. It is a shadowy, indistinct and undefined effort, but it is a definite part of their ultimate plan to gain control of the world.

We should be warned by the steps they are taking and the progress they have already made. The Free World must resolve that these "narrow waters" on the world's great trade routes must not be in Communist hands. Such a situation would dangerously weaken our position against world communism.

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

—By Drew Pearson—

Drew Pearson says: Jackie was a good mother even if she did try to sell Presidential gift jewelry; the surtax debate was hotter than the headlines indicated; Congressman Byrnes learns not to argue with a woman.

WASHINGTON-The inside story of Jackie Kennedy and her attempt to sell gifts from foreign potentates had a ring of truth in it, as told in the Ladies Home Journal by Mrs. Mary Barrell Gallagher, Jackie's former personal secretary.

On the other hand, the statements that Jackie did not pay sufficient attention to her children lacked the ring of truth. When JFK was a Senator, Jackie could be seen on the Georgetown playgrounds with her daughter Caroline almost every day.

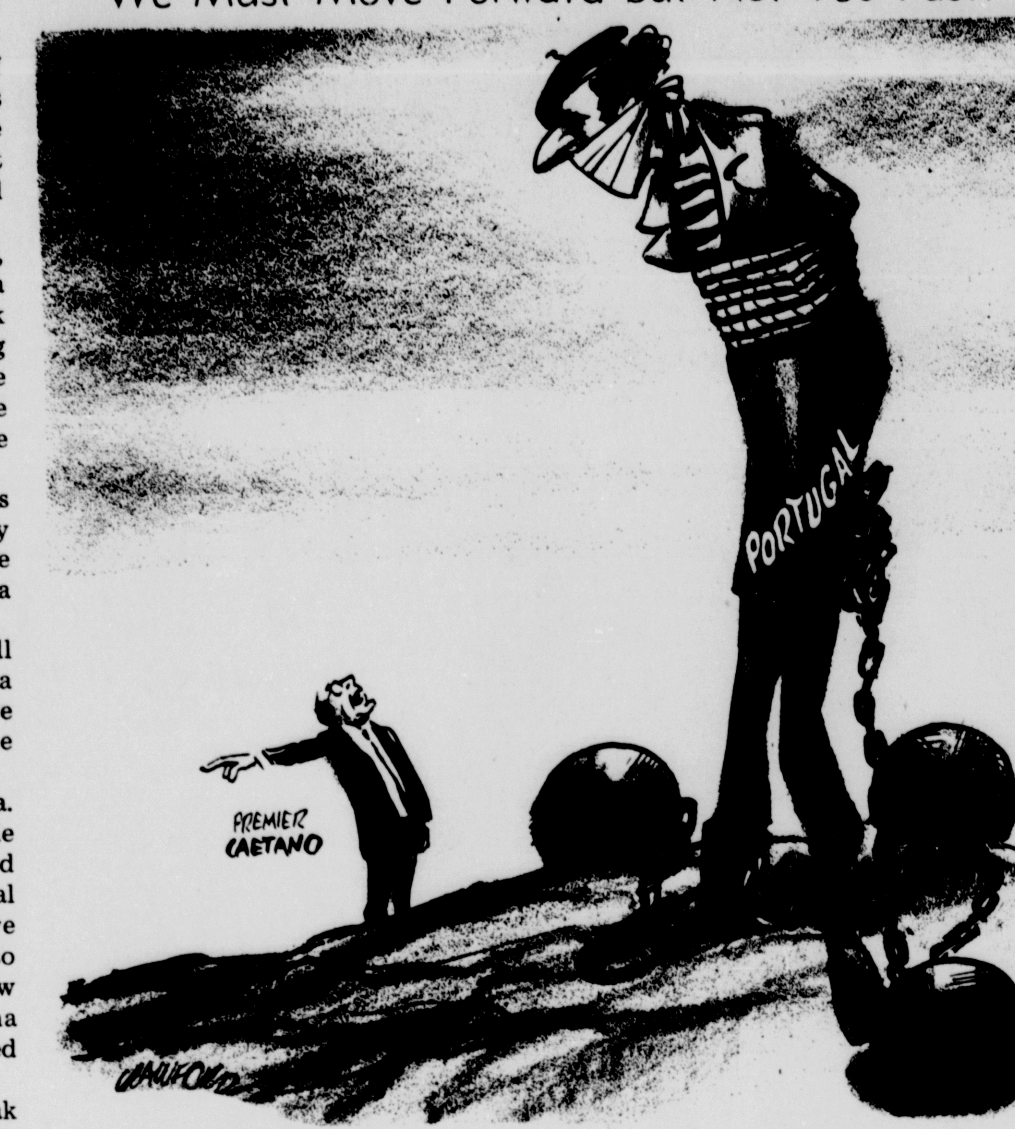

The temptation on the part of First Ladies to use the sometimes magnificent gifts from Foreign Monarchs was not confined to Jackie alone. She kept the diamond, emerald and ruby necklace given her by the President of Pakistan, valued at around $200,000, and Mrs. Eisenhower kept several beautiful gifts, one a solid gold mesh bracelet given her by the King of Saudi Arabia.

Mrs. Roosevelt was given a giant aquamarine by the Government of Brazil, and at one time she asked the late Bernard Baruch to talk to Tiffany's as to whether it could be divided up into smaller pieces and sold for the benefit of her children.

After publication of her plan in this column, Mrs. R. reacted quickly. She did not go through with her sale. Some years later, when I was visiting Hyde Park, she carefully pulled out a drawer to show me that the Brazilian aquamarine was still intact.

Once when suggested that Jackie sell her beautiful Pakistani necklace at auction in order to raise money for Washington's badly neglected orphanage, "Junior Village," she chided my wife that she knew exactly what she was going to do with the necklace. "I'll give it to Advice From J. Edgar Hoover: FBI Chief Analyzes New Left's Summer 'Work In' Strategy. FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover says he has become synonymous with a student. Tell your potential blunt talk. This means having unlimited and carefully cycled. If someone provide a fake story anyone really knows what's about prior and employment -- developing -- and why -- behind the New Left frontier, he does. "previous job" involved some of the New Left, Hoover to kind of manual labor. The analyze the newest fashion of impression must never be given action on the youth front, he dispatched the following, hard work.

By John Edgar Hoover, Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation. Washington, D.C.: -- The New Left which has rocked our campuses from coast to coast these past months is striking out in still another direction. Its current target: industry and business!

If you are employed in a factory or office, you may find yourself working next to a member of the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) this them thinking about how the summer. He will be carrying out a project promoted by this group, which has become chief spokesman for the New Left. In the tradition of the many "ins" so popular these days, the New Leftists have decided to call the project a "work-in."

The primary purpose of the program is most definitely not productive labor. In fact, a number of those participating in the work totally repugnant -- of work totally repugnant -- many of them have never performed a day's work in their lives. In the words of one militant leftist, "What's work? Dirty four-letter words... establishment things."

Why then this emphasis on obtaining jobs? Many New Leftists sense that they, as students, have become isolated from the wage earner. Now, they feel, is the time to take the initiative and seek out a common front with the men and women on the job. The result: the "work-in" -- designed to infiltrate American industry and gain the support of workers in disrupting the "war machine" and harassing the "establishment."

A manual has been circulated by a group within the SDS giving instructions on how to accomplish these goals. The Self-described as an aid to "Work-In Organizers in selecting and getting jobs," it contains "pointers on approaches to the political issues that we will be raising and encountering at work."

It is important, the manual stresses, the large plants with several hundred employees be chosen for the work-ins. The reasoning here is that not only can a larger audience be reached, but also, in all probability, the workers will already be organized in unions and more receptive to mass strike movements. In addition, more unskilled jobs will be available. Women are urged to try for jobs where large numbers of women are employed, such as telephone companies, department stores and hospitals.

SILENT SCREEN HEROES MAKE COMEBACK IN HOME MOVIES

Laurel and Hardy are making a comeback. So are Charlie Chaplin and W. C. Fields. Names that haven't seen top billing on movie marquees since the 20's and 30's are available in home movie entertainment.

Sears, Roebuck and Co.'s special catalog lists 357 classic films for sale in 8mm and Super 8 versions. Silent comedies account for almost half the titles listed, with 53 of Laurel and Hardy's and 33 of Charlie Chaplin's. Other funnymen include W. C. Fields, Robert Benchley and the Keystone Cops.

D. W. Griffith's 1915 epic, Intolerance, is often called the greatest film ever made. Home movie audiences are finding out why. The catalog is available free from Sears, Roebuck & Co.

A handsome Hollywood actor had been advised to take prostate gland treatments from one of the better known local genito-urinary specialists.

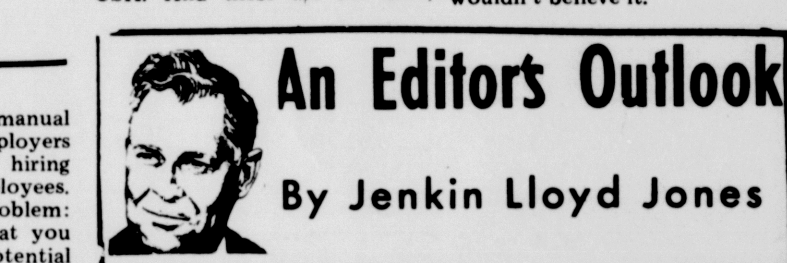

After several sessions, the actor told the doctor that the treatments were certainly improving his "comepower."

"But," the actor said, "I'm curious about these massages. What method are you using?"

"The doctor raised his big hands, smiled and said, 'Purely digital, I assure you.'"

The actor thought for a minute and then remarked, quizzically: "But, doc with BOTH hands on my shoulders?"

CHICAGO GETS MAMMOTH SHOW
Seven to nine thousand members of the men's wear industry of America will assemble to put on the biggest men's fashion show in history. It isn't really a show, in the strict sense of the word. ISTANBUL-Across the blue Bosphorus separating Europe from Asia, the tides of men and history have ebbed and flowed since the Achaeans. It is said that if you stand on the bridge over the Golden Horn you will be passed in 15 minutes by every race and every language.

Few places on earth are as suitable as Istanbul for contemplating the world as a whole, and the recent meeting here of the International Chamber of Commerce was devoted to this rocketing phenomenon of the 20th century -- the multinational corporation.

IT WAS only yesterday when great manufacturing concerns, heavy with genius and technology, began to seek not merely supply sources or markets but roots abroad. The factories of Unilever, IBM, Mitsubishi and SKF started springing out of alien soil like mushrooms, and hard on their heels came their competitors.

Many industries became multinational reluctantly and defensively. They had to meet competition. They sought to get behind tariff barriers. Governments of backward countries demanded payoffs.

But these governments have often exhibited conflicting and ambivalent attitudes. Many politicians and all the left-wing press decry "capitalist exploitation" and shout for expropriation. Having invited foreign companies to invest, resources draining away the wealth of backward lands for the benefit of distant owners. Socialism is any country's practice is now getting pretty old and nowhere where it has excluded or excessively harassed properly regulated private enterprise has its dividend record been anything but dismal.

The management explosion cannot be denied. Countries, whatever economic system they embrace, remain in competition with countries of all other systems. Far from crushing native competition, the multinational corporation has often forced it to work better.

Thirty years ago lizards and lice abounded in the so-called luxury hostels of many tropic countries. Today, as a result of the foreign ventures of Hilton, Intercontinental and Sheraton, excellent native-financed and native-managed competing hotels are adding vastly to their countries' tourist income.

SIDNEY E. ROLFE, in his report on The International Corporation for the ICC, says that governments of backward lands wishing to get for their peoples the fruits of the modern world would be wise to consider granting to the foreign investor a climate of "quiet enjoyment" so long as previously agreed-on rules are abided by.

"Free enterprise" includes the freedom to fail. It is in rigged economics where competition is discouraged and inefficiency is codified that the political chauvinism are powerful saboteurs. South America's last the longest.

A man was comfortably seated in a bus when a stylishly dressed lady boarded carrying in her arms a small pet monkey. Seating herself directly behind the man and lowering the monkey in her lap, the monkey instantly took the man's hat off and slapped him on his bald head.

The man put his hat on again with a scowl and again the monkey took it off, slapping his dome as he did so. Everyone on the bus took this as a big joke and laughed out loud at the monkey's antics.

After the monkey had done this several times he turned to the lady and said:

"Does this monkey belong to you, madam?"

Woman: "He certainly does." (haughtily)

Man: "Your first child, I presume."

Ann Landers Grandfather The Gospel Visitor Disturbed By Standards

Dear Ann: Why are modern parents so foolish? How can they expect their children to know the value of a dollar when allowances are handed out regularly and nothing is expected in return. Not even a "thank you." When I see my grandsons growing up to be loafers it makes me sick. Yet I don't dare say anything because it's not my place.

Please wake up the parents, Ann. Tell them to insist that their kids work after school, and on Saturdays and during summer vacations. They'll be better men and women for it. -- Ol' Timer

Dear Timer: I agree that kids should work, but do you know how hard it is for a teen-ager to find an after-school job, or summer work only? The labor laws were written many years ago to protect kids against exploitation in sweat shops. These laws should be changed. Today kids need to work as a matter of self respect. They need to expend their energies in useful and productive ways. But in most states there are all sorts of restrictions on ring minors.

So don't put the blame on the parents, Grandpa. There's more to this problem than meets the eye.

Dear Ann: My wife Ethel just asked me if I was queer. She then handed me a column about Stalling, Charleston; Myrtle men who wear women's Pugh, Wyatt; Edith Bailey, East underwear. It so happens that I have been wearing Ethel's pants for a long time.

Now hear this: When I was in World War II I ran out of shorts. The Ship's service store was sold out. In desperation I went to the WAES counter and bought white cotton panties in the largest size. They proved to be so much more comfortable than the broadcloth shorts that I never went back to the men's counter after that.

When I married Ethel I explained this whole thing to her and we never had any discussion about it until now. Of course I've had to be careful in the locker room at the Y for fear of being ridiculed, but I've kept my secret.

Am I queer because I put comfort ahead of conformity? What do you think? -- Charley

Dear Charley: I think that somewhere in a men's store you could find shorts that are comfortable. If you wanted to, that is.

Dear Ann Landers: I work hard all day and like to get to bed about 9:00 P.M. My wife has fallen into a habit of going over to the neighbor's house after I've gone to bed and sitting there till midnight or even later. The neighbor's husband is in Vietnam. I never gave it a thought until I saw a couple of movies about women liking each other in an unnatural way. Now I worry that something funny might be going on.

My wife is a wonderful mother and our marriage is good, except for this one thing. What are your ideas? -- B.H.

Dear B.H.: A wife who is so lonely that she needs to go the neighbors every night for company is in a bad way. Why don't you suggest that she invite friends in a couple of evenings a week -- or go to a movie or visit someone? Your marriage needs a transfusion and it's up to you to provide it, Bub.

Drinking may be "in" to the kids you run with -- but it can put you "out" for keeps. You can cool it and stay popular. Read "Booze and You -- For Teen-Agers Only." Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Of all the human injustices and errors, to condemn a man to die for a crime he didn't commit, is among the most unfortunate. In contrast to the sorrow of this person, is the great joy to hear, "There is therefore now no condemnation." This serves to illustrate to some extent what Paul meant when he said, in Romans 8:1, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

The first thing we need to notice concerning this great promise is: that it is a promise under the system of grace which comes through Christ. (Jno. 1:17) The meaning of "now" in the verse. And also it is a conditional promise, the conditions being, "In Christ Jesus, and walk after the Spirit."

Our illustration pictures the innocent suffering for another's crime. This is not true in regard to man, out of Christ who is condemned, to "everlasting destruction." (1 Thess. 1:9) "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." "For the wages of sin is death." (Rom. 3:23; 6:23)

It is truly a mystery why God needs to plead with man to accept his pardon and the release from condemnation, which sin brings. Yet there are many who are condemned to everlasting destruction, who will not comply with the conditions of pardon, who should be begging their release. The state, "In Christ" affords many blessings summed up by Peter, in the words, "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises." (2 Pet. 1:4) In order that God tells us, "There is now no condemnation," we must be in Christ. How? Paul tells us, "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3:26-27) Thus, the finishing act of faith is baptism, other acts are included, (repentance and confession) (Acts 2:38; Rom. 10:10) But we are in Christ after baptism. And there is more, we must walk after the Spirit which means, we follow the directions of the Spirit, which operates through the word of God in the New Testament. (Jno. 8:5; Jno. 15:3)

The POWER of FAITH

"Nothing could be more forlorn than the plight of the Italian seaman ashore in New York. He is confined aboard ship for the most part, even when in port, because he can neither afford the expense of recreation ashore, nor adjust to the unfamiliar language, places and customs."

This is the comment of the very Rev. Caesar Donazan C. S., Provincial Superior in New York of the order of The Society of St. Charles.

He knows first-hand of the loneliness and problems of the 5,000 Italian seamen who land in the port of New York area every month and he has done something about it. He has organized the Italian Seamen's Club, and is reconstructing a building that will house the organization where these strangers in our midst can feel at home so far away from home.

The Society of St. Charles was founded 81 years ago by the most Rev. John Baptist Scalabrini, Bishop of Piacenza in Italy. Bishop Scalabrini was moved by the plight of fellow Italians forced to migrate abroad in search of a livelihood. The Society serves the social and spiritual needs of Italians residing abroad and helps them adjust to their countries of adoption. Father Donazan has extended the activities to include the Italian Seamen's Club. It is another fine example of man serving his fellow man.

Parma Splits With Cahokia, Ill.

PARMA — Cahokia, Ill., grabbed a 3-2 win in the second game of the doubleheader here yesterday to gain a split after Parma had opened with a 2-1 victory.

Both games were pitching duels, with the defense turning in outstanding plays to back the performances on the mound in the sweltering heat.

Parma banged out five hits in the opening encounter, using two of those to score a run in the first and one hit for a third inning run.

David Evans who opened the inning with a single, scored the first run for Parma, racing around the bags on Bill Colwick's double.

Wendall Wagner scored what proved to be the deciding tally in the third after reaching first on a hit, he stole third and scored on a fielders choice. Cahokia had tied the score (1-1) in the top of the third.

Wagner went three for three, having a triple credited to his slate.

Mike Mitchell pitched a five hitter, striking out 10

and yielding only two walks. Larry Mitchell was the loser.

In the second game, it looked for five and one third innings as though Evans' 325 foot leadoff homer in the second inning was going to stand, but four sixth inning errors and two mis-judged balls enabled Cahokia to score three runs in the sixth inning and take a 3-1 lead into the seventh.

Parma's Wagner retire the first nine men he faced and held Cahokia hitless through the first four innings before yielding a fifth inning single. He ended the game with 11 strikeouts and two walks.

Jim Opperman collected the victory. Reggie Gregory collected two hits in three trips to the plate for Parma.

Evans scored Parma's final run after drawing a walk, he stole second and came in on errors by the catcher and third basemen.

The first game defeat was only the third in 15 games.

The Twins celebrated the holiday by bombing the A's 10-4 homers and seven runs in the as Harmon Killebrew, Rod his 20th with a man on, Carew hit his sixth with one on and Cardenas' fifth was a solo shot. Tony Oliva also doubled twice for two runs in the 16-hit attack.

The outburst dwindled Oakland's first place lead over the Twins to four percentage points with two games to go in the three-game showdown series.

Cash ignited Detroit's 4-1 victory over Baltimore with a three-run homer and then the weather man snuffed out any chance for a Baltimore fireworks display as rain ended the contest after 5-3 innings. It also washed out the second game of the scheduled twin bill.

But the Tigers have a long way to go if they still expect to catch Baltimore, for despite the victory, they still remain 10 games behind the high-flying Orioles.

Boston stood 11 games behind Baltimore with a 7-4 victory over Washington after the Red Sox dropped their seventh in a row, 5-1, in the opener of the twinbill.

In other games, Kansas City swept two from Seattle 13-2 and 3-2, the New York Yankees tripped Cleveland 5-4 before losing 4-1, and California stopped the Chicago White Sox 7-3 and then lost 3-1.

If You Were the Judge

Girl Watching Does Not Effect Judge's Ruling

By Jack Strauss, L.L.B.
Arnold parked his car in front of his house and began to remove his expired license plates in preparation to replacing them with new ones. From time to time, he took a few seconds off to look at the pretty girls passing by. When a pulchritudinous blonde sauntered by, however, he got so distracted that he absent-mindedly put the old plates back on his car instead of affixing the new ones. Shortly thereafter, Arnold took his car out for a spin and, as fate would have it, he was promptly ticketed for driving with improper license plates. "I had no intention of breaking the law," pleaded Arnold with the police officer. "The fact is, I've got new plates for my car. I'm just an innocent victim of a passing fancy." "Tell it to the judge," was the officer's answer, and Arnold did. IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict the girl-watching motorist of driving with improper license plates? This is how the judge ruled: YES! He held that committing the offense of driving with improper registration plates does not require an intent to break the law. It only requires driving with improper plates. (Based upon a 1961 New York County Court Decision)

Storms Kill 9; Up To 200 Missing

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The U. S. Coast Guard said today that perhaps as many as 200 persons were still unaccounted for in the wake of howling thunderstorms that swept into northern Ohio from Lake Erie Friday night, killing at least nine persons and injuring more than 300.

The Coast Guard said, however, that no drownings had been reported, that communication was poor, and that "it was only a matter of time" before any survivors of storm-related boating mishaps were found.

Forty Coast Guard boats and 12 planes were combing Lake Erie for persons from the 200 small boats the Coast Guard estimated capsized during the storms.

The Coast Guard said it hoped to have later in the day a complete list of all those unaccounted for.

The storm smashed into the Toledo area at 3:15 p.m. Friday, cutting off half the city's power and producing a tornado which damaged some 10 homes in the city's Point Place area.

Speeding eastward with winds clocked at 60 and 100 miles an hour, the storms produced other funnel clouds in Hancock, Huron, Cuyahoga, Geauga, and Lake counties.

Extensive damage to trees and power lines was reported all along the storm paths which extended more than 50 miles into the state from Lake Erie.

A Toledo man was killed by a falling tree at Cedar Point amusement park near Sandusky. At least three other persons were killed in the Cleveland area by trees, and two Cleveland men were electrocuted by downed power lines.

National Guard troops were ordered into Ottawa County and the Cleveland suburb of Lakewood to help clean up damage. Gov. James A. Rhodes said he would tour the northern part of the state today to assess the damage.

Several hundred persons were stranded temporarily on an island in the Cedar Point amusement park near Sandusky by high waters.

An estimated 200 persons escaped serious injury when a tent collapsed on them during a "Mardi Gras" at Fairport Harbor, east of Cleveland.

"I've never seen anything come up so fast and throw down so much water in so little time," said Robert Cullins of Dresden, Ohio, who was with his family at the Cedar Point amusement park when the storms hit.

"It was real funny at first, but then the storm came up all at once and everyone went into a panic," said Carol Harwell of Mansfield, one of the persons trapped on a small island in the park by rising waters.

"It just rained and rained," she said. "People were just running everywhere and there were lost children. Water was up to your knees in places."

"You say it sweeping across the lake from the west, a real bad storm," said Cleveland Robert Coatman, who was in his 16-foot boat awaiting a fireworks display at Cleveland's Edgewater Park.

"We headed for shore fast and ran right through the barrier the city had just put up to protect swimmers. Twenty boats must have hit it at the same time."

A short circuit in a beer cooler caused the fire. Minor damage was done to the cooler.

Seafaring Spain Space Age Port

By KENNETH L. DAVIS
PONTEVEDRA, Spain (AP) — Seafaring Spain, looking to the day when million-ton tankers and giant dry cargo carriers ply the oceans, hopes to parlay three Atlantic estuaries into Europe's port of the space age.

Maritime visionaries in the land of the Armada, foreseeing the need for four or five massive wholesale ports, count on the saw-toothed coast of Galicia just above Portugal to become a major complex handling well over 100 million tons of sea freight and petroleum a year.

Specifically, they count on the estuaries of Villagarcia de Arosa, Pontevedra and Vigo — minor Spanish ports now — to form the traffic-winning complex. All three together handled 1,202,000 tons, including fish, in 1967.

The economic council of northeast Spain syndicates calculated in a recent study of Spanish ports that by 1980 Europe would need four or five crude oil deposit ports, each with an annual capacity of 100 million tons as a minimum. By that year, the study concluded, sea freight passing near the Spanish Atlantic coast would reach around 870 million tons a year, of which 684 million tons would be petroleum.

Prototype of the wholesale port of the future is Bantay Bay, Ireland, where Gulf Oil has begun a project for a huge oil deposit complex. From this depository smaller tankers will fan out to serve petrol-hungry Europe.

Future wholesale ports, the Spanish Council decided, must be capable of handling ships of 500,000 to 900,000 tons. They must have room, too, for repair facilities, sufficient solid land around the ports for both petroleum and dry cargo deposits and more land for the industrial development the Spaniards figure will accompany such a port. Back of all this must be a top-notch land and communications.

Moreover, the council said, ports already crowded with industry will not do for lack of expansion room.

Not many places have the natural facilities needed. A tanker of 500,000 tons, for instance, needs labor and wharf depth of 100 feet. A 200,000-ton dry cargo vessel needs 67 feet depth. And, they need this depth with maneuvering room. The study tended to discard most better-known Spanish ports, mostly for lack of depth and space. Barcelona, largest of the Spanish general cargo ports with seven million tons in 1967, needs manmade dikes to protect against weather. Cost and overcrowding rule out Barcelona for the giant wholesale port, the study said.

Cartagena, largest of the petroleum ports, is well sheltered and handled 10 million tons, mostly petroleum, in 1967, but even with improvements under way it will be able to handle no more than 300,000-ton tankers and that not wharfside.

Cadiz, most ancient of them all, is shallow. Huelva has a narrow entrance and only 7.5 meters depth. Paisajes in the north has only 10 meters harbor depth and a narrow entrance.

A possibility is Bilbao, where Gulf Oil is involved in building a new refinery. In contrast, the estuary of Villagarcia de Arosa on the Galician coast provides two to eight miles of sheltered harbor with depths from 20 to 70 meters with natural island breakwaters.

These massive harbors are stacked atop each other, close enough to form one enormous complex. The idea still is only a dream among Spaniards but Spanish shipyards already are building tankers up to 325,000 tons up-coast and that would have been a dream a few years back.

Family Progresses From Cotton Picking to Farming

By H. H. TOWNSEND JR.
LILLBOURN — Hard work, diversified farming and good credit practices, with the help of the Farmers Home Administration, have been the key to success in farming for Leman F. Samples and his wife, Gunda, route one, Lillbourn.

Samples met his wife in 1957 in Germany while serving with the Army. He returned home and in 1959 she came to America, and they were married.

She had never seen a stalk of cotton, but went to the fields with him to help earn a living, as their only source of income was picking cotton.

Their hard work paid off — in 1961 James Girvin, Portageville, rented a 111-acre farm to Samples so he could begin farming for himself. It was at this time that he sought a loan from the Farmers Home Administration to begin his farming.

In a few years Samples and his wife moved to a 200-acre farm owned by H. C. Baldwin at Tallapoosa. Last year they moved to a 330 acre farm, also owned by Baldwin, about seven miles southwest of Lillbourn. All but 16 acres of the farm have now been brought to grade and irrigation wells dug.

This year he will grow 60 acres of cotton, 30 acres of corn, 42 acres of milo, 46 acres wheat and 136 acres of soybeans.

On his 16 acres of pasture, he has 31 sows and two boars. He presently has 80 feeder pigs, which he expects to sell this month.

With his balance farming practices and the extra income from hogs, Samples has always paid his crop loan, even in bad farming years.

He is an early riser, oft-times at work by four o'clock, looking after his hogs.

His greatest ambition is to someday own his own farm. His wife, born in Bamberg, Germany, goes to the fields and chops cotton and soybeans and helps with the feeding of the livestock. She also keeps an attractive home and finds time for needlework.

Arriving in St. Louis, after 12 days on a boat, she looked for her husband to-be, and waited for over an hour, with no sign of Samples. She had failed to realize that he didn't have an automobile and had to take a bus to meet her in St. Louis.

Unable to speak English very well, she managed to get a ticket on a bus to Portageville.

Somewhere midway between St. Louis and there, she passed him; unaware of this, of course, he proceeded to St. Louis to meet her. She arrived at Portageville about 4 a.m. and managed to make the local police understand that she was looking for Leman Samples. She was then taken to the home of his parents near Portageville.

Not finding his finance, Leman returned from St. Louis and the happy couple was reunited at 9 o'clock the next morning. They were married August 29, 1959, and have worked as a team ever since.

Gunda received her citizenship papers in 1964. She hopes to save enough money to return to Germany to visit her

Little White House Conference Complete

Numerous recommendations for schools, families, churches and government have been established by the 1970 White House Conference on Children and Youth.

Members of the Conference from Mississippi, Stoddard and Scott counties met 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Senior High School to draw up the final recommendations.

The conference made an overall observation about their studies. The conference found in all areas of discussion, that failure in the family is a great part of the trouble which exists in school, church and government activities.

Recommendations for schools are as follows.

A—Relevancy of curriculum to present-day and future needs. RECOMMENDATION: We recommend to the schools that a change from heavy emphasis on ancient history to a more emphasis on contemporary courses be carried out in the existing school program.

B—Youth Participation and Involvement.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend and encourage the schools to enforce regulations and rules promoted by the duly constituted authorities.

C—Sex Education.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend that sex education be the responsibility of the home with assistance from church and school, and that it include instruction in values, beginning at no specific age but preferably an early one.

D—Relevancy of teacher training, and instructional methods, materials and aides.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend that some way be found to fund the additional psychometric testing to children with preceptual learning disabilities, commencing with kindergarten or no later than the first grade.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend and encourage such actions as necessary to see that special education aids and counselors are available to children before their education proceeds to the point that a lack of the same would result in his or her failure.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend that the schools implement their counseling programs, and increase the same through additional staff, so as to include lower grades within their scope of work.

E—Continued education program responsibility to unwed school age pregnant girls and mothers.

RECOMMENDATION: We

recommend to the school authorities that an unwed mother be allowed to return to school and continue her education subsequent to the birth of her child.

RECOMMENDATION: We recommend that vocational and technical training be encouraged and increased, but not at the expense of academic training.

OBSERVATION: While the school has its responsibility for the educational training and character training, the primary responsibility remains with the family and church. The school can not replace either the family or church.

Recommendations for family are as follows:

A—Counseling services (family, pre-marital, in divorce) RECOMMENDATION: We recommend that licensed, trained counseling be made available in pre-marital and marriage matters.

B—Communication gap — parent — child relationships. RECOMMENDATIONS: We recommend that adults recognize the communication gap and take the initiative to eliminate it.

C—Day-Care Facilities. RECOMMENDATION: We recommend that day-care facilities be expanded to meet the needs of the communities.

D—Foster-Care Facilities. RECOMMENDATION: We recommend the State increase its share of funds toward Foster-Care facilities, particularly to meet the needs of special care homes.

OBSERVATION: The basic responsibility for youth is with the family, and the adult as head of the family holds this responsibility.

Recommendations for the church are: A—Youth Participation and Involvement. RECOMMENDATION: We recommend there should be the formulation of a youth committee with youth participation for the purpose of FOUR CHARLIE SAYS!

The manufacture of a good product is only one step in the process of the creation of wealth.

Shortly after World War II, Henry J. Kaiser built a good compact automobile which seemed to fit a real need in the American market. Although the new Kaiser compact, the "Henry J." was widely promoted the national media, the automobile was not accepted by the public.

Two years later other compact automobiles were in significant demand. The compacts claimed a profitable and permanent place in the American market.

Why did the Kaiser automobile fail to arouse what was obviously an important latent demand for a small, inexpensive car? Market analysts attributed the failure to several factors:

1. Insufficient time was given to the promotion of a new concept in automobiles.

2. The potential market for the car was not sharply defined. In the United States the compact is often a second, or third, family car. This trend was not anticipated in 1950.

3. Although the "Henry J" was intensively promoted, insufficient attention was given to specific benefits which could be derived from owning a small car.

4. Local advertising and sales efforts were inadequate. The lack of local dealers, salesmen, and local newspaper advertising was probably a decisive factor. Few people are willing to invest in an expensive product without a final stimulus in the local community.

Local dealers were needed to give personal assurances and demonstrations to prove that the promises of the advertising were valid. Such is the combination which keeps all automobiles on the market, and eventually builds the nation's wealth.

UNDERSTANDING

When I was growing up and went away - perhaps, to visit out-of-town for a day; there was always a phrase that my father would say: "Be good."

I paid little attention, except, maybe, to smile; my thoughts were on being away for a while, I doubted he noticed the words that he spoke; they were inconsequential, like a catch-phrase or joke.

"Be good!" ... Father died and years sped past. And, though dimming, my memories of him held fast. But, in the procession of life-filled days, I forgot his goodbys using that two-word phrase: "Be good."

... Recently, my son was going far away from family and friends, for a few day's stay. Suddenly, across the years, I understood. My last words to him were: "Goodbye, son. Be good."

The roadway centerline. If you drive a car, you see one virtually every day, along with road-edge striping, lane and crosswalk stripes and all manner of roadway markings.

The way they affect you is somewhat peculiar. You usually don't notice them unless they're not there. Other times, you're conscious of them only when you couldn't move without them -- like the centerline in a dense fog, for example.

There's an interesting story surrounding today's bright, multicolored, see - in - the - dark reflectorized roadway markings, and this is the first of three columns that will tell that story.

First, some history. The oldest on - the - pavement marking known is the centerline. Some say it dates back to Roman times. In the New World, there's a 400-year-old road that runs between Mexico City and Cuernavaca (Sair-na-va-ka). Made of paving stones, the center of this road contains a line of light-colored stones.

The next historical reference to pavement markings is dated 1911. Again, it concerns the centerline. The rediscovery of this as a driving safety aid is attributed to one Edward N. Hines of Detroit. As the story goes, he was driving his motor car one day behind a wagon, from which a small stream of white mortar was spilling.

"Eureka!" one can almost hear him say: "Why not paint a white line down the center of the road to help drivers stay on their own side?"

And so it began. But at first, and for a number of years thereafter, centerlines were applied only at particularly hazardous spots -- hills, curves, narrow bridges, etc. And they were painted by hand, with a brush, using white lead paint.

As traffic increased following World War I, use of the centerline spread to more and more stretches of main highway, hazardous or not. Machines were developed to lay the lines from the backs of moving trucks. Eventually, within the last 20 years, centerlines began to appear on secondary paved roads, and multilane highways started sprouting lines to denote each lane.

Another development that began to appear about 20 years ago was the yellow line that, when it's on your side of the centerline, denotes a "no passing zone". Still more recent are lines marking the side of the road and, even more current, the use of reflective material instead of white paint, to make the lines more visible at night.

The older you become, the more it costs you to have a good time.

IVAN IS GRABBING FOR THE ISTHMOSES

The Communist regime in Russia has been aware ever since World War II of the importance of ocean shipping and the control of foreign trade routes. A major effort is being made by Russia today to build up its merchant fleet, and the effort is meeting with great success. If present trends continue, in only a few years Russia will have far outdistanced the United States in the tonnage of its merchant ships.

Likewise, Russia has built up its navy until today that fleet is considered second only to that of the United States. Russia has well over 500 submarines, some of them armed with nuclear - type missiles. This fleet is large enough to patrol most of the world's major sea lanes.

But Russia is working on still another means of obtaining control of shipping routes. There are six straits or areas of "narrow water" through which most of the world's trade passes. Some of these are so narrow that only one ship at a time may pass. Yet, they are essential to fast, economical ocean trade.

The six points of narrow water are: the Suez Canal, the Panama Canal, Strait of Gibraltar, Strait of Malacca (between Malay peninsula and Sumatra), the Skagerrak leading out of the Baltic Sea, and the Dardanelles leading out of the Black Sea, The Baltic and Black Seas are virtually Russian lakes, which leaves four straits for the Russians to gain. All are potential bottlenecks in the hands of a power wanting to control world commerce.

The Suez Canal is under Egypt's Nasser. Egypt is receiving vast quantities of Communist aid, and many Russian technicians are in Egypt helping build the economy in various ways. In the event of war, Russia could probably exercise effective control at this point.

While Gibraltar presents a real problem, and is still guarded by the British, the Russians have conducted a build-up just across the strait of Morocco. They have built bases, delivered planes, and generally fortified the area.

We all know what is going on with regard to Panama. The Communist take-over in Cuba is one phase of the Red effort to gain control in Latin America, and especially to get control of the Panama Canal, the vital link between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. They have played upon the patriotism of youthful Panamanians to foment hatred for the United States until today a new treaty is being hammered out in secret between Panama and the United States - and the word is that the United States is making concessions about the canal.

If we turn over control of the canal to the weak Panamanian government, will we not be inviting the Communists to redouble their efforts to control the canal? It is a prize well worth their efforts. They are active in Venezuela, Colombia, Peru, Panama and other nearby countries - with the blessing of Castro and the Kremlin.

The Reds were also working toward control of the Malacca Strait while the Communists were in the ascendancy in Indonesia. They thought they would not only gain control of the strait but would be able to effectively handle trade with the rice bowl of Southeast Asia and encircle Singapore and India, as well as other small nations in the area.

Control of these four major straits would mean effective control of ship movements and world commerce. It is a shadowy, indistinct and undefined effort, but it is a definite part of their ultimate plan to gain control of the world.

We should be warned by the steps they are taking and the progress they have already made. The Free World must resolve that these "narrow waters" on the world's great trade routes must not be in Communist hands. Such a situation would dangerously weaken our position against world communism.

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

—By Drew Pearson—

Drew Pearson says: Jackie was a good mother even if she did try to sell Presidential gift jewelry; the surtax debate was hotter than the headlines indicated; Congressman Byrnes learns not to argue with a woman

WASHINGTON-The inside story of Jackie Kennedy and her attempt to sell gifts from foreign potentates had a ring of truth in it, as told in the Ladies Home Journal by Mrs. Mary Barelli Gallagher, Jackie's former personal secretary.

On the other hand, the statements that Jackie did not pay sufficient attention to her children lacked the ring of truth. When JFK was a Senator, Jackie could be seen on the Georgetown playgrounds with her daughter Caroline almost every day.

The temptation on the part of First Ladies to use the sometimes magnificent gifts from Foreign Monarchs was not confined to Jackie alone. She kept the diamond, emerald and ruby necklace given her by the President of Pakistan, valued at around $200,000, and Mrs. Eisenhower kept several beautiful gifts, one a solid gold mesh bracelet given her by the King of Saudi Arabia.

Mrs. Roosevelt was given a giant aquamarine by the Government of Brazil, and at one time she asked the late Bernard Baruch to talk to Tiffany's as to whether it could be divided up into smaller pieces and sold for the benefit of her children.

After publication of her plan in this column, Mrs. R. reacted quickly. She did not go through with her sale. Some years later, when I was visiting Hyde Park, she carefully pulled out a drawer to show me that the Brazilian aquamarine was still intact.

Once when I suggested that Jackie sell her beautiful Pakistani necklace at auction in order to raise money for Washington's badly neglected orphanage, "Junior Village," she chided my wife that she knew exactly what she was going to do with the necklace. "I'll give it to you," she said. Jackie, however, still has the necklace. -Acid Tax Debate- Some of the hottest parts of the fast-moving debate to continue the surtax were left out of the headlines. At one point, Rep. John Byrnes, R-Wis., who was leading Nixon's fight, hit back at charges that he opposed needed tax reforms while supporting the surtax.

"They (surtax foes) claim that unless this bill is held hostage we are not going to have any tax reform," declared Byrnes. "Do they have a scintilla of evidence to support this assertion? Absolutely not."

"I happened to make a study of the (reform) bills filed and not a single one came from your side of the Ways and Means Committee," shot back Rep. Charles Vanik, the Cleveland Democrat.

Byrnes was indignant. His voice shook with emotion. Pointing his finger angrily at Vanik and Rep. Martha Griffiths, D-Mich., he scolded: "I am amazed at the gentleman from Michigan suggesting that there is something wrong because we have not brought any (reform) proposals to a rollcall vote (in the committee). If the gentleman suggested proposal I am sure the Committee considered it."

Mrs. Griffiths rushed down the aisle and seized the microphone in her house well. "Oh, sir," she began. "I do not yield to the gentleman until she asks me to," interrupted Byrnes. "Impolite!" chided Vanik. "I yield to the gentleman," Byrnes changed his tune.

"I have offered any number," said Mrs. Griffiths. "I offered to cut the oil depletion allowance 7 1/2 per cent. And how did you vote?" "He voted no," replied Vanik on behalf of the silent republican. "You voted no, and you know you voted no," emphasized Mrs. Griffiths. "Let me give you another instance. I offered to knock out the Oil-Gas pipeline exemption."

She referred to a special exemption that would have saved pipeline companies millions in taxes, had they been excluded in the repeal of the 7 per cent investment credit. "How did you vote?" she asked. "You voted no."

The gentleman woman knows that the amendments she offered were amendments to this surtax bill and were not offered as part of the reform package," alibied Byrnes.

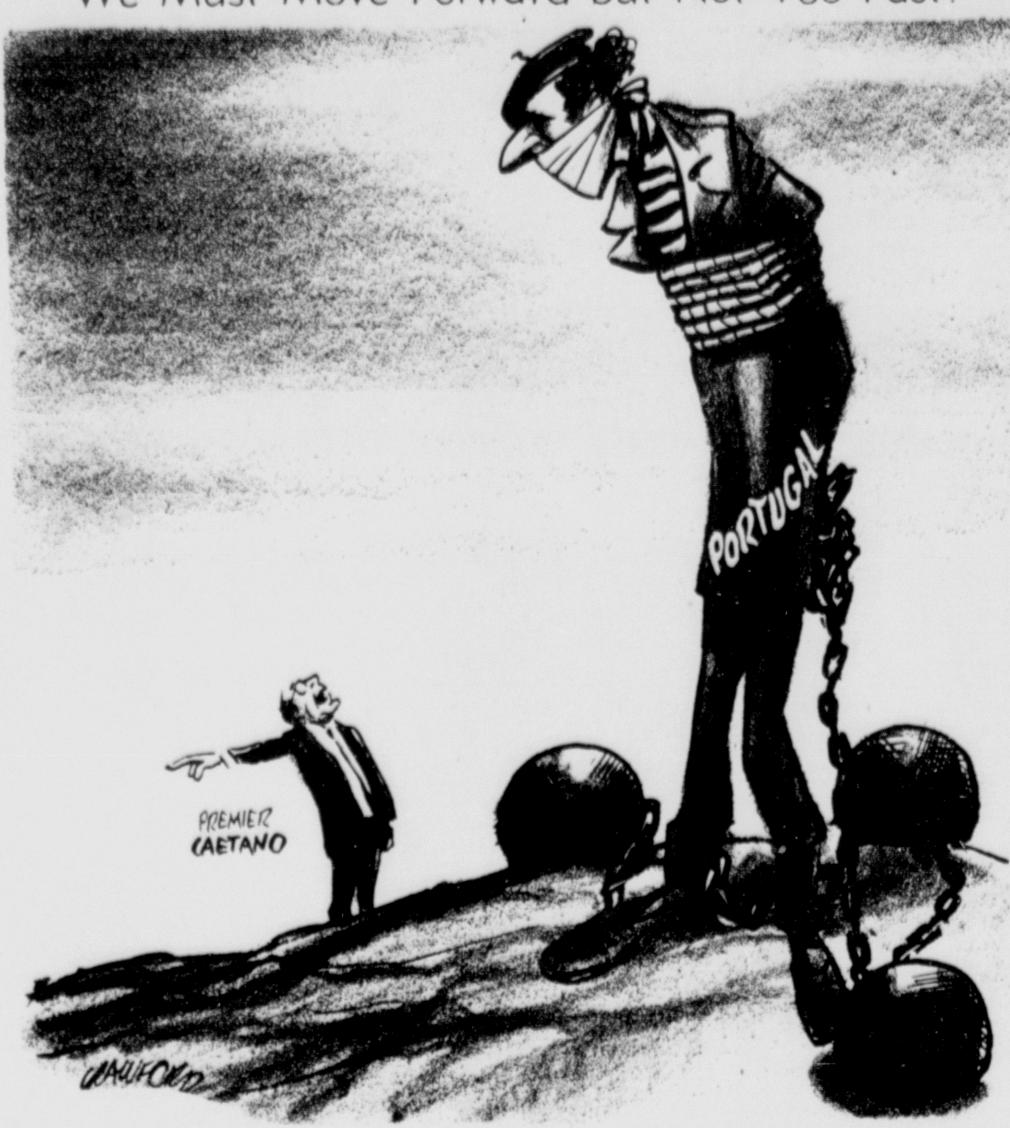

"We were working on the tax code, and they were germane to this bill," replied the lady from Michigan. "I offered the amendment to cut off the oil and gas pipelines; that was Germane, and this would have saved some money. We are creating a tax loophole."

"I have listened and I have learned not to get into an argument or a discussion with a lady, because it is quite apparent that you cannot win," concluded the leader of the GOP tax forces.

-Nixon on Vietnam- President Nixon has told friends that he is determined not only to pull out of Vietnam but not to get involved in another Vietnam. We have become so bogged down in Vietnam that we have been unable to respond to threats elsewhere in the Far East, he says.

Nixon would like to build up a reserve striking force in the Pacific that would be ready to react at once to a crisis. As the first step, he intends to restore the combat forces that used to be stationed in Okinawa and Hawaii. The troops being withdrawn from Vietnam will probably be kept on a stand-by basis in Okinawa and Hawaii. This doesn't mean Nixon intends to use them at random. He doesn't want to get drawn into any more Vietnams and has notified the Thais that they should expect to defend their own country from Communist infiltration.

these New Leftists. The manual points out that some employers are hesitant about hiring students or summer employees. The solution for this problem: Simply hide the fact that you have become synonymous with a student. Tell your potential blunt talk. He feels strongly. He employer, you have been speaks strongly. His views are employed since graduating from authoritative for his sources are high school. This means having unlimited and carefully culled. If someone provide a fake story about prior and employment -- preferably indicating that the "previous job" involved some kind of manual labor. The impression must never be given that the job seeker is afraid of hard work.

Further instructions are set forth in the manual for those who are finally hired. The job-holder is advised not to be too eager to expound his views on Vietnam and the "establishment." "Don't get into knock-down, drag-out arguments," the manual cautions, with those who are outspoken in support of Government policy. Patience is the keyword; "play it by ear," the admonition. In other words, don't expect to make instant member of the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) this summer. He will be carrying out his role in a project promoted by this group, which has become across how employers exert chief spokesman for the New Left. In the tradition of the days, the New Leftists have decided to call the project a "work-in."

The primary purpose of the program is most definitely not productive labor. In fact, a number of those participating in work totally repugnant -- many of them have never performed a day's work in their lives. In the words of one militant leftist, "What's work? Dirty four-letter words... establishment things."

Why then this emphasis on obtaining jobs? Many New Leftists sense that they, as students, have become isolated from the wage earner. Now, they feel, is the time to take the initiative and seek out a common front with the men and women on the job. The result: PLP sponsored this program to infiltrate American industry and gain the support of workers in disrupting the "war machine" and harassing the "establishment."

A manual has been circulated by a group within the SDS giving instructions on how to accomplish these goals. The Self-described as an aid to "Work-In Organizers in selecting and getting jobs," it contains "pointers on approaches to the political issues that we will be raising and encountering at work."

It is important, the manual stresses, the large plants with several hundred employees be chosen for the work-ins. The reasoning here is that not only can a larger audience be reached, but also, in all probability, the workers will already be organized in unions and more receptive to mass strike movements. In addition, more unskilled jobs will be available. Women are urged to try for jobs where large numbers of women are employed, such as telephone companies, department stores and hospitals.

The difficulty of actually being hired is recognized by don't know how to cook them."

SILENT SCREEN HEROES MAKE COMEBACK IN HOME MOVIES
Laurel and Hardy are making a comeback. So are Charlie Chaplin and W. C. Fields. Names that haven't seen top billing on movie marquees since the 20's and 30's are available in home movie entertainment.

Sears, Roebuck and Co.'s special catalog lists 357 classic films for sale in 8mm and Super 8 versions. Silent comedies account for almost half the titles listed, with 53 of Laurel and Hardy's and 33 of Charlie Chaplin's. Other funnymen include W. C. Fields, Robert Benchley and the Keystone Cops.

D. W. Griffith's 1915 epic, Intolerance, is often called the greatest film ever made. Home movie audiences are finding out why. The catalog is available free from Sears, Roebuck & Co.

A handsome Hollywood actor had been advised to take prostate gland treatments from one of the better known local genito-urinary specialists.

After several sessions, the actor told the doctor that the treatments were certainly improving his "comepower."

"But," the actor said, "I'm curious about these massages. What method are you using?" "The doctor raised his big hands, smiled and said, "Purely digital, I assure you."

The actor thought for a minute and then remarked, quizzically: "But, doc with BOTH hands on my shoulders?"

CHICAGO GETS MAMMOTH SHOW
Seven to nine thousand members of the men's wear industry of America will assemble to put on the biggest men's fashion show in history. It isn't really a show, in the strict sense of the word. Rather, it's an assemblage - an annual business meeting of the men who make and sell the clothing worn in the USA. And these are the men, collectively, who wear the newest, smartest and handsomest clothes in the world. Chicago will get a good look - perhaps an advance look, in many cases - of what the well-dressed man will wear.

MONKEY BUSINESS
A man was comfortably seated in a bus when a stylishly dressed lady boarded carrying in her arms a small pet monkey. Seating herself directly behind the man and lowering the monkey in her lap, the monkey instantly took the man's hat off and slapped him on his bald head.

The man put his hat on again with a scowl and again the monkey took it off, slapping his dome as he did so. Everyone on the bus took this as a big joke and laughed out loud at the monkey's antics.

After the monkey had done this several times he turned to the lady and said: "Does this monkey belong to you, madam?" Woman: "He certainly does." (haughtily) Man: "Your first child, I presume."

THE EXPORT OF KNOW-HOW
ISTANBUL-Across the blue Bosphorus separating Europe from Asia, the tides of men and history have ebbed and flowed since the Achaean. It is said that if you stand on the bridge over the Golden Horn you will be passed in 15 minutes by every race and every language.

Few places on earth are as suitable as Istanbul for contemplating the world as a whole, and the recent meeting here of the International Chamber of Commerce was devoted to this rocketing phenomenon of the 20th century -- the multinational corporation.

IT WAS only yesterday when great manufacturing concerns, heavy with genius and technology, began to seek not merely supply sources or markets but roots abroad. The factories of Unilever, IBM, Mitsubishi and SKF started springing out of alien soil like mushrooms, and hard on their heels have come their competitors.

Many industries became multinational reluctantly and defensively. They had to meet competition. They sought to get behind tariff barriers. Governments of backward countries demanded payrolls.

But these governments have often exhibited conflicting and ambivalent attitudes. Many politicians and all the left-wing press decry "capitalist exploitation" and shout for expropriation. Having invited foreign companies to invest, the countries that have unfavorable payments balances and are short of foreign exchange often forbid or prohibitively tax the importation of machinery and equipment necessary to make these plants productive.

THE underdeveloped countries constantly pressure foreign companies that have built plants within their borders to push for exports, for this would obviously diminish their trade deficits. But relatively cheap labor is often relatively inefficient as well, and where production runs are short it is hard to amortize machinery.

Thus, auto assembled in foreign factories sometimes prove more expensive to build than efficiently made imports, even when freight and tariffs are added. In Argentina it costs about $5,000 to make a car that can be made in Tokyo, Detroit or Wolfsburg for $2,000.

ONE obvious cure is the regional grouping--a number of contiguous countries getting together on a free-trade basis to provide a common market. Britain's 13 colonies in North America were the first experiment in this direction and the present six-nation European Community is a shining example. One such group in Central America shows promise. No Central American republic could support a shoe factory, for example, but 11 million people in a common market might.

Still, national jealousies and political chauvinism are powerful saboteurs. South America's ambitious plan for a Latin American Free Trade Assn. seems to have been born dead. Of the 100 underdeveloped countries in the world, dozens are ludicrous ministates. Sixty-five have fewer than 5 million people and only six--India, Pakistan, Brazil, Mexico, Argentina and Indonesia--have a total annual income greater than Connecticut.

IN SPITE of all these hazards and obstacles, the growth of multinational companies has been spectacular, and the reason is simple: They possess management, research and capital. They have also been performing a priceless service to world trade, for they don't have to invest abroad and can thus impel some degree of rational behavior in the governments that seek them.

Where they are successful, these companies are often inclined, in the gambler's term, to let their winnings ride, that is to temporarily forego dividends from their foreign subsidiaries in favor of further expansion. Joint ventures, on the other hand, that is companies operated by foreign corporations but where ownership is shared or even controlled by native stockholders, have to pay all the dividends they can.

THERE remains the classic bugaboo, waved endlessly by Marxists, of neo-colonialism-grasping foreign corporations fattened on cheap labor and looted natural resources draining away the wealth of backward lands for the benefit of distant owners. Socialism is any country's privilege, but socialism in practice is now getting pretty old and nowhere where it has excluded or excessively harassed properly regulated private enterprise has its dividend record been anything but dismal.

The management explosion cannot be denied. Countries, whatever economic system they embrace, remain in competition with countries of all other systems. Far from crushing native competition, the multinational corporation has often forced it to work better.

Thirty years ago lizards and lice abounded in the so-called luxury hostels of many tropic countries. Today, as a result of the foreign ventures of Hilton, Intercontinental and Sheraton, excellent native-financed and native-managed competing hotels are adding vastly to their countries' tourist income.

SIDNEY E. ROLFE, in his report on The International Corporation for the ICC, says that governments of backward lands wishing to get for their peoples the fruits of the modern world would be wise to consider granting to the foreign investor a climate of "quiet enjoyment" so long as previously agreed-on rules are abided by.

"Free enterprise" includes the freedom to fail. It is in rigged economies where competition is discouraged and inefficiency is codified that the rickshaw and the toted suck will last the longest.

Ann Landers Grandfather The Gospel Visitor Disturbed By Standards

Dear Ann: Why are modern parents so foolish? How can they expect their children to know the value of a dollar when allowances are handed out regularly and nothing is expected in return. Not even a "thank you." When I see my grandsons growing up to be loafers it makes me sick. Yet I don't dare say anything because it's not my place.

Please wake up the parents, Ann. Tell them to insist that their kids work after school, and on Saturdays and during summer vacations. They'll be better men and women for it. -- Ol' Timer

Dear Timer: I agree that kids should work, but do you know how hard it is for a teen-ager to find an after-school job, or summer work only? The labor laws were written many years ago to protect kids against exploitation in sweat shops. These laws should be changed. Today kids need to work as a matter of self respect. They need to expend their energies in useful and productive ways. But in most states there are all sorts of restrictions on ring minors.

So don't put the blame on the parents, Grandpa. There's more to this problem than meets the eye.

Dear Ann: My wife Ethel just asked me if I was queer. She then handed me a column about men who wear women's underwear. It so happens that I have been wearing Ethel's panties for a long time.

Now hear this: When I was in World War II I ran out of shorts. The Ship's service store was sold out. In desperation I went to the WAVES counter and bought white cotton panties in the largest size. They proved to be so much more comfortable than the broadcloth shorts that I never went back to the men's counter after that.

When I married Ethel I explained this whole thing to her and we never had any discussion about it until now. Of course I've had to be careful in the locker room at the Y for fear of being ridiculed, but I've kept my secret.

Am I queer because I put comfort ahead of conformity? What do you think? -- Charley

Dear Charley: I think that somewhere in a men's store you could find shorts that are comfortable. If you wanted to, that is.

Dear Ann Landers: I work hard all day and like to get to bed about 9:00 P.M. My wife has fallen into a habit of going over to the neighbor's house after I've gone to bed and sitting there till midnight or even later. The neighbor's husband is in Vietnam. I never gave it a thought until I saw a couple of movies about women liking each other in an unnatural way. Now I worry that something funny might be going on.

My wife is a wonderful mother and our marriage is good, except for this one thing. What are your ideas? -- B.H.

Dear B.H.: A wife who is so lonely that she needs to go the neighbors every night for company is in a bad way. Why don't you suggest that she invite friends in a couple of evenings a week -- or go to a movie or visit someone? Your marriage needs a transfusion and it's up to you to provide it, Bub.

Drinking may be "in" to the kids you run with -- but it can put you "out" for keeps. You can cool it and stay popular. Read "Booze and You -- For Teen-Agers Only." Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

By: REEDUS M. BAUGHER

Of all the human injustices and errors, to condemn a man to die for a crime he didn't commit, is among the most unfortunate. In contrast to the sorrow of this person, is the great joy to hear, "There is therefore now no condemnation." This serves to illustrate to some extent what Paul meant when he said, in Romans 8:1, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

The first thing we need to notice concerning this great promise is: that it is a promise under the system of grace which comes through Christ. (Jno. 1:17) The meaning of "now" in the verse. And also it is a conditional promise, the conditions being, "In Christ Jesus, and walk after the Spirit."

Our illustration pictures the innocent suffering for another's crime. This is not true in regard to man, out of Christ who is condemned, to "everlasting destruction." (1 Thess. 1:9) "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." "For the wages of sin is death." (Rom. 3:23; 6:23)

It is truly a mystery why God needs to plead with man to accept his pardon and the release from condemnation, which sin brings. Yet there are many who are condemned to everlasting destruction, who will not comply with the conditions of pardon, who should be begging their release. The state, "In Christ" affords many blessings summed up by Peter, in the words, "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises." (2 Pet. 1:4) In order that God tells us, "There is now no condemnation," we must be in Christ. How? Paul tells us, "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3:26-27) Thus, the finishing act of faith is baptism, other acts are included, (repentance and confession) (Acts 2:38; Rom. 10:10) But we are in Christ after baptism. And there is more, we must walk after the Spirit which means, we follow the directions of the Spirit, which operates through the word of God in the New Testament. (Rom. 8:5; Jno. 15:3)

The POWER of FAITH

"Nothing could be more forlorn than the plight of the Italian seaman ashore in New York. He is confined aboard ship for the most part, even when in port, because he can neither afford the expense of recreation ashore, nor adjust to the unfamiliar language, places and customs."

This is the comment of the very Rev. Caesar Donanzan C. S., Provincial Superior in New York of the order of The Society of St. Charles.

He knows first-hand of the loneliness and problems of the 5,000 Italian seamen who land in the port of New York area every month and he has done something about it. He has organized the Italian Seamen's Club, and is reconstructing a building that will house the organization where these strangers in our midst can feel at home so far away from home.

The Society of St. Charles was founded 81 years ago by the most Rev. John Baptist Scalabrini, Bishop of Piacenza in Italy. Bishop Scalabrini was moved by the plight of fellow Italians forced to migrate abroad in search of a livelihood. The Society serves the social and spiritual needs of Italians residing abroad and helps them adjust to their countries of adoption. Father Donanzan has extended the activities to include the Italian Seamen's Club. It is another fine example of man serving his fellow man.

Parma Splits With Cahokia, Ill.

PARMA — Cahokia, Ill., grabbed a 3-2 win in the second game of the doubleheader here yesterday to gain a split after Parma had opened with a 2-1 victory.

Both games were pitching duels, with the defense turning in outstanding plays to back the performances on the mound in the sweltering heat.

Parma banged out five hits in the opening encounter, using two of those to score a run in the first and one hit for a third inning run.

David Evans who opened the inning with a single, scored the first run for Parma, racing around the bags on Bill Colwick's double.

Wendall Wagner scored what proved to be the deciding tally in the third after reaching first on a hit, he stole third and scored on a fielders choice. Cahokia had tied the score (1-1) in the top of the third.

Wagner went three for three, having a triple credited to his slate.

Mike Mitchell pitched a five hitter, striking out 10

and yielding only two walks. Larry Mitchell was the loser.

In the second game, it looked for five and one third innings as though Evans' 325 foot leadoff homer in the second inning was going to stand, but four sixth inning errors and two mis-judged balls enabled Cahokia to score three runs in the sixth inning and take a 3-1 lead into the seventh.

Parma's Wagner retire the first nine men he faced and held Cahokia hitless through the first four innings before yielding a fifth inning single. He ended the game with 11 strikeouts and two walks.

Jim Opperman collected the victory.

Reggie Gregory collected two hits in three trips to the plate for Parma.

Evans scored Parma's final run after drawing a walk, he stole second and came in on errors by the catcher and third basemen.

The first game defeat was only the third in 15 games.

Killebrew hit Carew and Leo Cardenas blasted his 20th with a man on, Carew hit his sixth with one on and Cardenas' fifth was a solo shot. Tony Oliva also doubled twice for two runs in the 16-hit attack. Bob Miller, 2-2, took the three-game showdown series.

Cash ignited Detroit's 4-1 victory over Baltimore with a three-run homer and then the weather man snuffed out any chance for a Baltimore fireworks display as rain ended the contest after 5-2 innings. It also washed out the second game of the scheduled twin bill.

But the Tigers have a long way to go if they still expect to catch Baltimore, for despite the victory, they still remain 10 games behind the high-flying Orioles.

Boston stood 11 games behind Baltimore with a 7-4 victory over Washington after the Red Sox dropped their seventh in a row, 5-1, in the opener of the twinbill.

In other games, Kansas City swept two from Seattle 13-2 and 3-2, the New York Yankees tripped Cleveland 5-4 before losing 4-1, and California stopped the Chicago White Sox 7-3 and then lost 3-1.

In the National League the Kansas City crushed the Paul Schaal's sacrifice fly and run-scoring singles by Oliver and Kelly put the Royals ahead 3-0 in the nightcap. Reliever Don O'Riley saved the victory for Dick Drago, 4-7, after Steve Hovley hit his first major league homer for Seattle in the eighth and Gus Gil singled in another run.

Sandy Alomar put California ahead 2-1 with a run-scoring single in the eighth inning of its first game and Jay Johnstone followed with his first major league grand slam.

But Joe Horlen, 5-9, silenced the Angels on four hits in the nightcap and Carlos May and Gail Hopkins hit solo homers. Luis Aparicio singled in the tiebreaking run.

The Yankees won their fourth in a row when Gene Michael and Bobby Murcer each singled in two runs and Joe Pepitone one for a 5-0 lead and Jack Aker stopped a Cleveland comeback with 3-3 innings of hitless relief for Fritz Peterson.

Juan Pizarro, 2-2, in his first start of the year, halted New York on five hits in the nightcap and Ken Harrelson homered for two runs and Tony Horton singled for two more.

Gibson, Cards KO'd

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals can't even hit with a bunt single and Billy Williams hit a bloop double for into a double play when they want to.

Then along came Santo. Gi had overpowered Santo twice when the Cubs had the goahead runs in scoring position.

"I've bragged about Gibson see the Cards fail to score a man so much that I think I convinced myself that he's better than I am," Santo admitted. "He's so great you don't feel so bad when he gets you out."

However, Santo pulled a single to left for another run. Out came Schoendienst and the Cardinals ending the string.

"I got so dizzy out there a couple of times that it looked like Timmy (McCarver) had 10 fingers," Gibson said.

Red looked at it another double play," Red moaned.

"And the Cubs were laying back, ready to give us the run, but our guy (Joe Torre) couldn't hit the ball to the second baseman."

Instead he hit it to third baseman Ron Santo. Santo fired a strike to catcher Randy Hundley and nailed Flood in a dust-raising play at the plate.

Gibson, who hadn't been knocked out of the box in 56 games over two years found out what it was like again in dropping to 10-6. Ferguson raised his mark to 11-5 in the 95-degree heat.

Don Kessinger, who scored the Cubs first run in the third on a sacrifice fly after he tripled, singled and stole second in the 10th. Glenn Beckert followed

If You Were the Judge

Girl Watching Does Not Effect Judge's Ruling

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.
Arnold parked his car in front of his house and began to remove his expired license plates in preparation to replacing them with new ones. From time to time, he took a few seconds off to look at the pretty girls passing by. When a pulchritudinous blonde sauntered by, however, he got so distracted that he absent-mindedly put the old plates back on his car instead of affixing the new ones.

Shortly thereafter, Arnold took his car out for a spin and, as fate would have it, he was promptly ticketed for driving with improper license plates.
"I had no intention of breaking the law," pleaded Arnold with the police officer. "The fact is, I've got new plates for my car. I'm just an innocent victim of a passing fancy."
"Tell it to the judge," was the officer's answer, and Arnold did.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict the girl-watching motorist of driving with improper license plates?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! He held that committing the offense of driving with improper registration plates does not require an intent to break the law. It only requires driving with improper plates. (Based upon a 1961 New York County Court Decision)
